Program Announced for the Washington Oregon Cascadia Higher Education Sustainability Conference March 6-8 at Oregon State University

Agenda to focus on the Mindscape and Landscape: The Intertwined Nature of Mental, Social and Planetary Health

January 11, 2023 – The 2023 Washington Oregon Cascadia Higher Education Sustainability Conference (WOHESC) taking place March 6-8 at Oregon State University is an event built to inspire change, facilitate action, and to promote collaboration around sustainability within the Cascadia region's higher education institutions. Tours, keynotes, plenaries, sessions, workshops, and networking opportunities give participants the tools to advance environmental and social justice at their own higher education institutions after attending the conference.

The conference theme takes a holistic approach to exploring the relationship between mindscapes and landscapes in order to establish a sense of connection with the environment, to inspire learning from one’s emotions, and to offer insights on coping, adaptation, and resilience. Conference content will encourage attendees to consider holistic well-being as a tool to drive an equitable and sustainable world forward.

As a regional conference, the WOHESC program addresses the priority issues for higher education in the Cascadia region, with a broader lens on a national or global scale.
